

Mick Pope

Qualifications

Dr Mick Pope has degrees in mathematics, physics, meteorology and theology, including a PhD from Monash University in Tropical Meteorology. He is currently enrolled in a Masters in Theology.

Profile

Mick's research interests include climate change, tropical meteorology, a theology of evolution and purpose, and ecotheology/ecomissiology.

Science/Faith interests

Mick is a regular contributor to Zadok Perspectives (where he is also reviews editor) and The Melbourne Anglican, as well as a number of other publications from time to time on issues of science and faith.

Mick is the coordinator of Ethos Environment, an environment/creation care think tank of Ethos: EA Centre for Christianity and Society, and maintains a blog <http://ethos-environment.blogspot.com>.

He is also on the climate change advisory group for TEAR and the working group examining establishing A Rocha in Australia.